STEEPED IN HISTORY

The park grounds once accommodated Madryn Castle, built by the noble Jones-Parry family of the Madryn estate back in the 19th Century, the biggest landowners on the Peninsula at the time.

Today, the Tudor gatehouse is all that remains of the once grandiose mansion that was burned to rubble during a mysterious fire in the 1960's.

A few years later, the grounds were renovated and repurpose as a holiday park. Today Madryn Castle covers 110 permanent pitches plus the brand new Pritchard Lodge, available for rent.

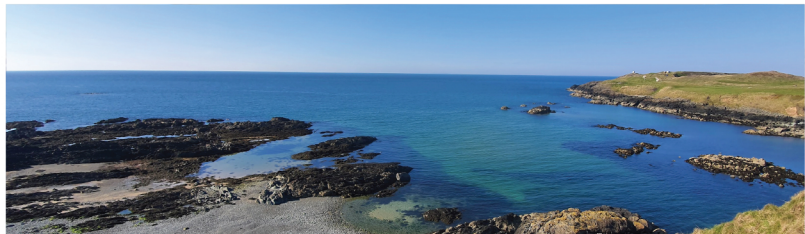

Parts of the old castle can still be seen today, as the original gatehouse was beautifully restored in 2011 and today functions as the park's main office and reception.
